Today, the Wagga Wagga Botanic Gardens feature the first trees planted in 1962. The gardens were officially opened in 1969 by the Director of Botanic Gardens situated within the Willans Hill Reserve. Construction of the Botanic Gardens started in 1961, and a model railway connecting the gardens with the nine distinct garden areas, Chinese pavilion, three to the Entrance Gate, Pavilion and a marble sculpted trees in lawn areas, with native plantings around the perimeter. Many of the shrubs have been pruned, giving an insight into their natural growth and shape.

The main area of this section features scattered trees in lawn areas, shrublands, ornamental plants, and trees located on the borders of the garden. These plants have been adapted succulence as a strategy to withstand drought.

The area displays watered ferns and rainforest trees. This gallery model is run by an automatic spray system that operates throughout the day to create the conditions required to grow rainforest plants in very hot and dry climates.

This area is popular for formal private functions. The café provides ideal growing conditions for roses. The Waterwise garden was developed to demonstrate and provide practical advice on landscaping and irrigation to reduce water use and conserves energy and systems can be seen and touched. Both native and exotic plants are incorporated into this garden.
